BRECKINRIDGE COUNTY GIVES HER FIRST SON TO DIE ON THE BATTLEFIELDS OF FRANCE

Lewis W. Herndon, of Irvington, Killed in Action, March 30. He Was the First Volunteer From This County. Enlisted in May, 1917. Member of Prominent Family. Memorial Services Held.

From henceforth until time immemorial the name of Lewis Washington Herndon will linger in the minds and hearts of every man, woman and child in Breckinridge county as the first home boy to volunteer and the first to be killed on the battlefield in the world's greatest struggle for liberty and righteousness.

On last Thursday afternoon the message came to Mr. and Mrs. Jess M. Herndon, of Irvington, from the Adjutant General of the United States, saying, "your son, Lewis Washington Herndon, was killed in action March 30." The same day of the message, his parents received a letter from him dated March 17th and he told of his work saying that he was building bridges or wood in place of steel and he also said that his company of Engineers were in line with the British speaking soldiers. Herndon was a member of Co. D, 6th Engineers corps.

When the mother received the word she was prostrated with grief and while both of the parents are saddened, yet they have never been heard to express a word of regret for they can not help but be deeply proud of this, their son, who has shown the supreme self-sacrifice—he gave his life for his country.

Messages and letters have poured in to the Herndon home from all over the state, bearing words of deepest sympathy and of the highest praise of this young hero.

Member of Prominent Family

Herndon was 21 years old March 21st. He was born and reared in Irvington and was a member of one of the most prominent families in Breckinridge county.

He was educated at Russellville, Ky. and he had just finished his course in Electrical Engineering at the Kentucky State University at the time he enlisted. When President Wilson issued the call for volunteers, Herndon took his examinations and passed and was released from commencement exercises of the University because he was anxious to enlist and do his part in saving America.

He was first sent to Fort Thomas, Ky. for training, then to the barracks of Washington University. Having successfully passed all of his examinations there, he was later sent to France in October. Mr. and Mrs. Herndon went to New York to see him before he left and the last thing he said to his mother was that he felt it his duty to go and said "I must go."

Young Herndon was very popular among his colleagues and in his home town. He was an exceedingly handsome young man and with his personal magnetism, his high principles, his sincere devotion and loyalty to his country and to those whom he loved, he won more friends than most young men of his years are able to obtain.

Besides his parents, Herndon had two younger brothers, Fairleigh and Jess, for whom he was fighting.

Memorial Service.

A memorial service was held, Sunday morning at the Methodist church in Irvington, to pay tribute to the county's first hero.

The services were conducted by Rev. Reid, of the Baptist church, who made a short talk in memorial of Lewis W. Herndon and Rev. P. H. Ryan, of the Methodist church, gave the address of the morning.

Beautiful music was rendered and there were present two boys in service who were comrades of Herndon. They were Lieut. John Gibson, 159th Depot Brigade, and Corp. Hubert Livers, both from Camp Zachary Taylor.

Rev. Ryan, in his address, said:

"Greater love hath no man than this: that a man lay down his life for his friends." Love is that element in a man and woman that make them kin to God. Love is that which meets every need nobly, that responds to every situation in fullest measure. There are some occasions in which it is necessary for love to express itself merely by a look of kindness, a nod of approval, a smile of appreciation. At other times it must express itself in words of cheer, of encouragement, of consolation. Still other occasions call for action, and some for a prolonged series of acts, as when the mother gives proof of her love by continued watching at the bedside of a

The Allotment Flag

Francis R. Gregory

Here's the banner The Government offers:

As a symbol of "duty well done"—

If Cloverport buys the allotment

Of Bonds in The Liberty Loan.

Civic pride should inspire us to win it,

Ernest effort will capture the prize;

Yet, there's more in achieving such honor

Than you may at first realize—

Every soldier buy dreams of sure Victory,

God grant that his dream may come true!

Altho God, in His mercy, protects him,

Yet some aid is expected of You.

Therefore, dig way down deep for your dollars,

"Over the Top" with your gold;

Shell out your shekels, your ducats;

On purse-strings now loosen your hold!

Uncle Sam guarantees every penny,

Aid, protect each brave boy "over there."

Now most loyally strive,

Be an "Ace in the Drive,"

Toward The Liberty Loan. Do Your Share!

OVER THE TOP WITH BETTER ROADS SATURDAY

A Vote for 20 Cent Road Tax Is Really a Swat at the Hun.

Hard surfaced highways are an absolute necessity in any system of military preparedness. Germany's ability to make the showing she has, was mainly possible because of her great system of hard surfaced roads which fed her country in every direction. Our Federal Government is now urging these states to put forth every effort to develop the highways of this nation. This Government has now more than 20,000 trained men constructing a great system of military highways in France. These roads are of permanent construction, many with metal, to a depth of two feet. Thereby it is shown that it is your patriotic duty to your country and community to vote for Better Roads in Breckinridge county next Saturday. Can you do less?

His work for the Government till now has prevented his accepting professional calls, only at rare intervals, but, feeling that his duty to his country was paramount to his private interests, he sacrificed his profession until he completed the work assigned to him. Group II. Pupils over 10 and under 12 years of age.

Group III. Pupils over 12 and under 14 years of age.

Group IV. Pupils over 14 years of age; the last group to include both 8th grade and High School students.

The essays submitted by group I shall contain not less than 100 words; those submitted by Group II not less than 200 words; and those submitted by Groups III and IV not less than 500 words.

The essays must be in the hands of the undersigned chairman not later than April 27, and should give the age, name and address of the contestant.

For the best essay in each group a prize of $2.50 in U. S. Thrift Stamps will be given. The prizes are contributed by all the banks of the county and the banks at Cloverport, Irvington and Hardinsburg will select the judges.

The prize essay from each group will be published in one or all the county papers. We urge all boys and girls over the county whether in school or out to take part in this contest as a patriotic privilege.

The teachers in every community, whether engaged in school or not, should enlist the interest of every pupil who can be reached.

Teachers and pupils get busy and help the Breckinridge county "Drive" go "Over the Top."

Remember this is a modest request for you to "Do your bit," and it is a small "bit" compared with that of the Boys in the trenches who give their all when they go "Over the Top" to make secure the peace and luxury which we here at home enjoy.

Mrs. M. B. Kincheloe, Chairman of Breckinridge County Speakers Committee for Third Liberty Loan, Hardinsburg, Ky.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

What It Is!

By John L. Alexander.

Membership

The International Sunday School Association is an organization of Sunday school workers irrespective of their denominational ties. The constituency of the Association, then, is made up from the Sunday-school workers of every evangelical Christian denomination, but membership in the Association is purely on a voluntary basis. Any Sunday school worker who wishes to associate himself or herself with other Sunday-school workers is considered a member of the International Sunday School Association by virtue of the simple fact of being a worker in the Sunday-school.

The International Sunday School Association does not compete with the Sunday School Boards of the denominations, but is rather the common meeting place for Sunday-school workers of all denominations.

Relation of Denominations

The following paragraphs, adopted by the International convention in 1911 defines the relation of the International Association to all evangelical denominations:

"The International Association, in short, disclaims the role of either master or servant to the denominations, or as having itself any authority whatsoever over the denominations. When ever the door of Sunday-school service is open to the International Association or its auxiliaries, these associations will gladly enter and serve as the denominations severally or collectively may desire, and in turn will gratefully receive from the denominations like service and support, but it will thus co-operate and serve the denominations only as ally and friend, not as master or mere servant. The best service the International Association can render to the denominations is when it helps the denomination to do its own work effectively through its own (International) agencies, and as such steadfast and serviceable ally the International Association may confidently claim and receive the cordial support of the denominations."

Object

One of the objectives of the International Sunday School Association is to stimulate Sunday-school work so that it may be well done in the local Sunday school, but it does not seek any authority over the local Sunday-School and it does not pretend nor desire to settle the Sunday-school policy for the local school.

Field of Service.

The main field of service for the International Sunday School Association is along community inter Sunday school lines. Briefly its aims may be stated as follows:

1. To promote the educational and evangelistic interest of Sunday-school work everywhere within its field.
2. To co-operate with all agencies and forces that have for their aim the development of the Sunday-school life of the North American Continent.
3. To be a common, rallying organization for the Sunday school workers of all evangelical denominations and thus foster the unified spirit of the Kingdom of Christ.
4. To especially direct and stimulate community or inter-Sunday school work for the help and encouragement of local Sunday-school workers along educational lines in both principle and method.

Territory.

The International Sunday School Association covers the United States, Canada, Mexico, Central America, and the West Indies. It accomplishes its work through a system of Auxiliary

Sunday School Associations: State, Provincial, County, District, or Township and city. These associations are voluntary and autonomous in character.

There are 43 States and Provincial Associations. In these fields 2,592 counties have County Sunday School Associations, and there are approximately 10,000 District or Township Associations. The large cities of the continent, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburg, Minneapolis, Birmingham, Cleveland, Dayton, Toronto and Montreal, have active associations. About 21,000 conventions are held each year with an attendance of from four to five million Sunday school workers. Wherever there is a real Sunday-school interest there is a Sunday School Association.

Authority.

The Sunday School Association convention is the sole source of authority in association life and procedure. These conventions are delegated bodies, any local Sunday-school having the right to send its own local workers to the District or Township, County and State or Provincial Conventions. The State or Provincial Associations have the right to send delegates to the International Convention in proportion to the Sunday-school enrollment of their respective fields.

The primary and final authority for all action in the International Sunday School Association is inherent in the International Convention. Between conventions the authority is vested in the International Executive Committee which is elected by the International Convention from nominations made by the State and Provincial Associations.

Departments.

The Department of Field Administration directs the promotion of the Association's field plans and policies. The Department of Education is charged with the educational content of the Association and plans all programs and policies. The department of Business Administration is responsible for the office, accounting, supplies and finance and is the clearinghouse for the department of Field Promotion and Education. Regular reports from each department are made to the Board of Trustees and by the latter to the Executive Committee. They are then approved, modified, changed or rejected by the International Convention.

Since January 31, 1907, by act of the Congress of the United States of America, the International Sunday School Association has been an incorporated body.

Divisions.

For purposes of administration, the work of the International Sunday School Association is classified under four divisions. The Elementary of Children's Division cares for the interests and religious education of all children under twelve years of age. The Secondary or Young People's Division ministers to the welfare of those pupils in the Sunday school between twelve and twenty-five years of age. The Adult Division stimulates the religious and service life of the mature men and women in the Sunday school enrollment. The Administrative or Management Division is an incentive to Sunday school superintendents and other general officers. The entire constituency of the Sunday school falls under one or all of these divisions.

A Piker Patriot is a man who loudly cheers the marching soldiers but keeps a padlock on his pocketbook.

A Piker Patriot is a man who goes home every night to a comfortable fireside and a happy family, who enjoys all the blessings and opportunities that America gives, who has a good job and good wages, but doesn't even buy a $50 Liberty Bond on easy payments.

A Piker Patriot is a man who bought a Liberty Bond last October, one-tenth the size he could have taken, and now when approached by a Liberty Bond salesman, sticks out his chest and says “I've bought one.”

A Piker Patriot is a man who can easily take ten thousand dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds but only takes a thousand.

THE FIRST TO FALL.

Heretofore, the people of Breckinridge county have not realized in the fullest sense that America is really at war. We have not done our full duty in subscribing to the Liberty Bonds; and while we have given what we have thought was the most we could give to the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the K. of C's. and the Red Cross, yet we believe it is going to seem nothing in comparison of what we are going to give in the future, for Breckinridge has had a challenge—we had said to us by those blood-thirsty Huns, "I have killed your first son, now what are you going to do?"

It seems a remarkable coincidence that the first Breckinridge county boy to be killed in action, should have been the first to enlist from his county and the first to go to France, this, however, is true of Lewis Washington Herndon, our first hero. And when we speak of him as a hero we mean it in the fullest sense of the word, for he was not just a hero of the war but he lived the life of a hero every day; he had the heroic qualities of courage, loyalty and the greater love for his fellow-man so like the Master whom he was known to follow. His death on the battlefield was characteristic of his very life; he lived and loved and died that we might live.

But his life was not given in vain. Nay, we of Breckinridge county dare not let it be in vain. We have accepted the challenge and from now on we shall give of our worldly wealth for Liberty Bonds; we will give till it hurts and work till our bones ache for the Red Cross; and finally we will give our all before we lose our liberty and let this young boy's death have been in vain.

Today we honor Lewis Washington Herndon.

GRANT SIX

A Wonderful "Buy"

ONLY those who look somewhat closely into comparative motor car values fully appreciate how much the GRANT SIX gives—yet there are enough of these people to have built the reputation of the GRANT SIX as "a wonderful car for the money."

And there is no question that this is so.

The overhead-valve engine alone is enough to make it a notable car. When the many other mechanical features are considered, and also the size, the beauty and the riding comfort are added, the GRANT SIX looms up above any other car of comparable price.

We believe it is the most economical six in existence. Thousands of owners average 20 miles to a gallon of gasoline, 900 miles to a gallon of oil and over 7000 miles on standard makes of tires.

Right now while spring invites you to outdoor life and the entire summer is before you and you will make greatest use of your GRANT SIX, place your order and make sure of a car.

BRECKINRIDGE COUNTY GIVES

loved one day and night as she tenderly ministers to his every need. But the highest expression of love is that which is manifested in the laying down of one's life that others might live.

The life of Jesus was a continual outpouring of self. He spent His time and His energy day in and day out in healing the pain racked bodies of men and in speaking words that brought rest to their storm tossed spirits and pointed them the way out of the bewildering labyrinth of life that led to safety and to peace. He spent long hours of the night talking with his father that He might gain further strength to minister to those whom He loved. But the crowning halo of His life was won in the hour of His death. It was his death that vindicated His message and His life. It is the CROSS that has focussed the attention of succeeding ages and has inspired men to deeds of heroic sacrifice and self giving. Jesus was a young man only 33 years of age when the great crisis of His life confronted Him. He was in the full vigor of manhood with red blood coursing thru His veins and with bodily powers untainted by encraving vices. He loved life. He did not want to die. When he went into the garden to wage the great fight of His life, His agonizing prayer was: "Father, if there be ANY OTHER WAY, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, NOT MY WILL, BUT THINE, BE DONE." And when he found there was no other way He went forth like a conqueror and met death like the true Hero He was.

Our young men across the seas love life. They will cling to it tenaciously as long as they can do so honorably. They do not want to die. But when they see that there is "No Other Way," they will go into the arms of death as unflinchingly as their Savior before them. And we are beginning to see that there is no other way for many of them. American blood is being spilt and much more will have to be poured out before a real peace can come. At the beginning of the great war in 1914, nearly all Americans were pacifists from the President on down. We said, "Let us stay out. It is none of our affair. Let them fight it out among themselves." But we did not know then as we do now. We did not know that there were then on fire in the German War Department minute plans for the subjugating and enslaving of the United States for that is what German domination means. We did not see then that if we left the Allies unsupported that German militarism would swamp them and then find us an easy prey. That is all clear to us now. And our young men who go into battle go forward with the sublime conviction that in deed and in truth they are fighting for the protection of their own homes, their own mothers, their own sisters and to save them from the unspeakable fate that has befallen the womanhood of Europe under German ruthlessness. That if they die, they fall in defense of their country and all that they hold dear. And truly, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

The ringing message contained in the death of Jesus has not been lost upon the world. His followers are finding His example the supreme inspiration to nerve them to meet the test when their own time comes. Troupier O'Connor told of the Chaplain who unhesitatingly threw himself upon a live bomb, receiving fifty-three wounds in his own body, and saving fifteen comrades from death. The war, horrible as it is, is teaching men some of the great elemental truths of life. They are learning to give themselves unstintingly as they did not dream they could. Many are losing limbs, sight, hearing, and even life itself; but some are finding their own souls for the first time and many are finding that their best chance to serve their generation is to die that it might live. Glorious and many are the deeds of heroism that the war has made manifest: the stand of the Belgians against the first thrust of the German war machine; the gallantry of the Canadians, English, French and allies on many a bloody field; but no act of valor surpasses the account given of the stand of the American Engineers against overwhelming odds holding back with their bodies the German hordes until reinforcements came up. It was there that Lewis Herndon gave his life that those he loved might live. It is in moments like these that we exclaim in triumph that our hearts ache "O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory! Death is swallowed up in victory!"

And yet, I am sure that all of us must wonder at times like this why it is that one so young must die, why one whose life gave such promise should suddenly be brought to a close like the broken shaft of a column. It is not for us to know the answer to the many questionings of our hearts as they reach out for truth and consolation, but there is one answer that brings

WOMEN WILL NOT ALLOW NEXT DRAFT TO DELAY MANUFACTURE OF "TOOLS OF VICTORY"

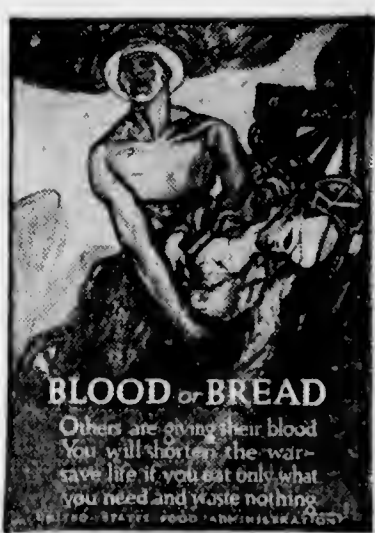

There will be no confusion and delay in the manufacture of the tools of victory when Uncle Sam issues the second call for men, now said to be set for May 1. For here is a typical scene in all the war munition factories. Girls and women who are taking the place of men in the lighter work. This fair maiden is putting the final touches to turnbuckles for airplanes, in one of the big plants, "somewhere on the Atlantic coast." Therefore, Uncle Sam will know no labor scarcity when the next million Hun hunters go to training camps.

great comfort to my mind when one so young is taken. The answer is this:

"We live in deeds, not in years; in thoughts, not in breaths, in feelings, not in figures on the dial. We should count time by heart throbs. He most lives who thinks most, feels noblest, acts the best."

If that be the true measure of life, surely Lewis Herndon lived! A young life that had the respect, admiration, and love of the entire community; a life that met every situation nobly and whose death will be a perpetual summons and challenge to higher things to those of us who remain surely such a life has not been lived in vain. It is in time of sacrifice that God's great truths are revealed to us. Abraham Lincoln, according to his own testimony, was not a Christian until the day on which it fell to his lot to pay America's tribute to the fallen heroes at Gettysburg. As that great soul looked out upon the fresh graves of those who had given their all for others, the meaning of Calvary burst in upon him, and he surrendered his life in consecration to Christ Jesus as his Lord. It was on that day that he uttered words that the world shall not forget, and which best interpret the meaning of the sacrifice of Lewis Herndon.

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that the destiny of this nation might live. (And let me say that in this present war the destiny of this nation, and of all nations that love liberty, hangs more in the balance than it did in the war of the Sixties.) It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggle here have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather (here is the message that the spirit of Lewis Herndon speaks us across the seas) to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion that we here HIGHLY RESOLVE that these dead shall NOT HAVE DIED IN VAIN that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom and that government for the people, by the people, shall not perish from the earth." Can you not hear the challenge of our departed friend from the spirit world? It is a call to higher things, to better, more unselfish living; to the support of our country with every atom of our strength and with our lives if need be, until the work is freed from the awful spectre of German barbarism. And the call goes deeper. Our friend can see the great realities of life now with a clearness that was not possible while in the flesh. He sees that the issues in the present struggle are not only between tyranny and liberty, but between sin and righteousness. Sin is at the bottom of the war and of every evil that prevails upon the happiness of man. Sin will remain, even after the war reaches its end. The challenge of this hero is that every man, woman and child to enlist under the banner of the Prince of Peace, the Lord of Righteousness, to wage relentless warfare until sin and heart aches are no more.

I would say to those who loved our brother most, whose sacrifice in giving him up is greatest, that He who said, "Greater love hath no man than this," also said "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." There is no death for those who love Jesus. Your boy loved his Savior, and exemplified that love both in faith and in life. He is not dead but asleep. He is in the ante-room awaiting an entrance to heaven. He has gone the way that all must go, for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." "It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown in a natural body, it is raised in a spiritual body." That same Jesus says to you now: "Come to me all ye that are weary laden, and I will give you rest. Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am ye may be also." In that place and it will not be long there will be a remission with those who have gone before. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain for the former things are passed away."

May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, and the inspiration of this hour be with you for ever,
Rev. P. H. Ryan

KENTUCKY WILLS TO WIN THE WAR

PEOPLE DISPLAY THE RIGHT
SPIRIT TO HELP BOYS

ARE WILLING TO SAVE WHEAT

Food Administrator Delighted With Splendid Enthusiasm of Blue-Grass
State To Give Up Men, Money and Food For Liberty's Cause.

—Louisville, Ky.

Telling blows against the Germans are being struck by the Food Army of Kentucky—the army which includes all the farmers of the country, all the city people who are raising war gardens, and all the people in both city and country who sit down to three square meals a day. All parts of the state are represented in the army raised by the Food Administration and which, under the banner reading "Food Will Win the War" is conducting the big Spring Offensive against waste at home and hunger and want in the ranks of the Allied soldiers and their dependents.

Federal Food Administrator F. M. Sackett is pleased at the work being done. Kentucky is a hard state to reach, but it can be reached, and it has been reached. Mr. Hoover's admonition, "Food Will Win the War," is being heeded, and President Wilson's injunction to "enlist in the service of the Food Administration" is being followed unreservedly.

Every county in the state has a Food Administrator. Any mill, any merchant, any farmer, any consumer troubled by a vexing technical regulation can get his troubles removed, or settled, by going to the nearest county seat. And the administrators without exception report a willingness to cooperate which is met with everywhere. "If wheat is needed, wheat will be raised in my county, even though a financial loss is entailed," is the way one administrator put it in conversation recently. "Then if it is necessary the people who raise it will sell it all, so our soldiers and their associates in arms can get it, and themselves eat cornbread all the year."

Something of that same spirit has been manifested both by producers and consumers everywhere in Kentucky. Mr. Sackett was not at all surprised at the composure with which the latest wheat-saving regulation was promulgated, for this very reason. The latest regulation says no person must eat more than six pounds of wheat a month, which is one and one-half pounds a week.

"And that means six pounds of all kinds of wheat products, too," one administrator explained. "It doesn't mean six pounds of bread, and then a lot of macaroni and cakes and crackers, too. It means six pounds of wheat products per person per month."

Soldiers and their families must have bread. Wheat is the only bread-making product which can be sent to Europe now. Corn would germinate during the long journey. American and Allied soldiers must have wheat bread or quit fighting; hence the Food Administration has asked the people of Kentucky to limit themselves to six pounds of wheat flour per month.

Continue Wheatless Days.

Federal Food Administrator F. M. Sackett advises the continuance of wheatless days. "Continued observance of wheatless days and meals will aid in keeping consumption down," Mr. Sackett said. "People are offered the alternative of saving wheat by doing without entirely on certain days and meals, or by using less at all times, but I would recommend both. Saving wheat is a military necessity and individual consumption must be held to six pounds a month if we are to win the war."

"Potato Week" has been highly successful. Merchants everywhere pushed the sale of potatoes and it is believed potatoes were found on the dining table at every meal in a majority of homes. Mr. John W. Burns, of the Food Administration office in Louisville, who has had years of experience in the milling business, estimates that the people of Kentucky have saved 10,000 barrels of flour by eating potatoes during "Potato Week."

No Seizure Needed Here.

The announcement comes from Washington that the appeal to farmers of the whole United States to be patriotic and bring all their wheat to market has met with an unsatisfactory response in some sections of the country that has been rather distressing. If the Washington announcement had been put in plainer words, it would read: "Some American farmers are not patriotic. They think more of getting a little extra money for their wheat than they do of the American and associate soldiers who need bread so badly."

But Washington has sent out another announcement. It is that unless the farmers market their wheat by May 1 the Government may seize it.

Kentucky farmers can not understand why such drastic action should be necessary. Kentucky farmers, realize that a farmer who holds on to his wheat when the army needs it, trying to extort more money in payment therefor, is just as heartless as the man who refuses to give a soldier a drink of water.

Nikky inspected himself in the glow of a street lamp. Save for some dust, and a swollen lip, which he could not see, he was not unrepresentable. Well enough, anyhow, for the empty streets. But before he started he looked the house and the neighborhood over carefully. He might wish to return to that house.

For two hours he walked, and returned his interrupted train of thought. At last, having almost cleared the city, he came to the Cathedral. It was nearly midnight by the clock in the high tower. He stopped and consulted his watch. The fancy took him to go up the high steps, and look out over the city from the colonnade.

Once there, he stood leaning against a column, looking out. There was someone coming along the quiet streets, with a stealthy, shuffling gait that caught his attention. So, for instance, might a weary or a wounded man drag along. Exactly so, indeed, had Peter Niburg stumbled into his house but two hours gone.

The footsteps paused, hesitated, commenced a painful struggle up the ascent. Nikky moved behind his column, and waited. Up and up, weary step after weary step. The shadowy figure, coming close, took a form, became a man—became Peter Niburg. Now, indeed, Nikky roused. Beaten and sorely bruised, Peter Niburg should have been in bed. What stealthy business of the night brought him out?

Fortunately for Nikky's hiding place, the last step or two proved too much for the spy. He groaned, and sat down painfully, near the top. His head lolled forward, and he supported it on two shaking hands. Thus he sat, huddled and miserable, for five minutes or thereabouts. The climb rang out the hour.

At ten minutes past the hour, Nikky heard the engine of an automobile. No machine came in sight, but the throbbing kept on, from which he judged that a car had been stopped around the corner. Peter Niburg heard it, and rose. A moment later a man, with the springiness of youth, mounted the steps and confronted the messenger.

Nikky saw a great light. When Peter Niburg put his hand to his breast pocket, there was no longer room for doubt, nor, for that matter, time for thinking. As a matter of fact, never afterward could Nikky recall thinking at all. He moved away quietly, hidden by the shadows of the colonnade. Behind him, on the steps, the two men were talking. Absorbed in themselves and their business, they neither heard nor saw the figure that slipped through the colonnade, and dropped, a blood curdling drop, from the high end of it to the street below.

Nikky's first impulse, beside the car, was to cut a tire. By getting his opponent into a stooping position, over the damaged wheel, it would be easier to overcome him. But a hasty search revealed that he had lost his knife in the melee. And second thought gave him a better plan. After all, to get the letter was not everything. To know its destination would be important. He had no time to think further. The messenger was coming down the steps, not stealthily, but clattering, with the ring of nails in the heels of heavy boots.

Nikky flung his long length into the tonneau, and there crouched. It was dark enough to conceal him, but Nikky's was a large body in a small place. However, the chauffeur only glanced at the car, kicked a tire with a practiced foot, and got in.

He headed for the open country. Very soon his passenger knew that he was in for a long ride possibly, a cold ride certainly. Within the city limits the car moved decorously, but when the suburbs were reached, the driver put on all his power. He drove carefully, too, as one who must make haste but cannot afford accident.

Nikky grew very uncomfortable. His long legs ached. The place between the shoulders where the conchero had landed his powerful blows thrummed and lent. Also he was puzzled, and he hated being puzzled. He was marveled, too. He disliked that most of all.

After a time he raised his head. He made out that they were going east, toward the mountains, and he cursed the luck that had left his revolver at home. Still he had no plan but to watch. Two hours' ride, at their present rate, would take them over the border and into Karula.

With a squealing of brakes the machine drew up at the frontier. Here was a chain across the highway, with two sets of guards. Long before they reached it, a sentry stepped into the road and waved his lantern.

Nikky burrowed lower into the car, and attempted to look like a rug. In the silence, while the sentry evidently examined a passport and flashed a lantern over the chauffeur, Nikky cursed the ticking of his watch, the beating of his own heart.

Then came a clanking as the chain dropped in the road. The car bumped over it, and halted again. The same formalities, this time by Karulan sentries. Then the jerk following a hasty letting-in of the clutch, and they were off again.

For some time they climbed steadily. But Nikky, who knew the road, idled his time. Then at last, at two o'clock, came the steep ascent to the very crest of the mountain, and a falling back, gear by gear, until they climbed slowly in the lowest.

Nikky unfolded his length quietly. The gears were grinding, the driver bent low over his wheel. Very deliberately, now that he knew what he was going to do, Nikky unlatched his time and slipped it off. It was a push thing, this plan he had in mind, rush under any circumstances, in a moving car—particularly rush here, where between the cliff and a precipice that fell far away below, was only a winding ribbon of uneven road.

Nikky, he waited his moment, and then, with one singularly efficient gesture, he flung his time over the chauffeur's head. He drove a car himself, did Nikky—not his own, of course; he was far too poor—and he counted on one thing—an automobile driver acts from the spinal cord, and not from the brain. Therefore his brain may be seething with a thousand frenzies, but he will shove out clutch and brake feet in an emergency, and hold them out.

So it happened. The man's hands left the wheel, but he stopped his car. Not too soon. Not before it had struck the cliff, and then taken a sickening curve out toward the edge of the precipice. But stop it did, on the very edge of eternity, and the chauffeur held it there.

"Set the hand brake!" Nikky said. The lumps were near enough the edge to make him dizzy.

The chauffeur ceased struggling, and set the hand brake. His head was still covered. But having done that, he commenced a struggle more furious than forceful, for both of them were huddled up.

And now Nikky was forced to an unsoldierlike thing that he afterward tried to forget. For the driver developed unexpected strength, refused to submit, got the time off his head, and, seeing himself attacked by one man only, took courage and fell to. He picked up a wrench from the seat beside him, and made a furious pass at Nikky's head. Nikky ducked and, after a struggle seemed the weapon. All this in the car, over the seat back.

It was then that Nikky raised the wrench and stunned the man with it. It was hateful. The very dull thud of it was sickening. And there was a bad minute or two when he thought he had killed his opponent. The man had sunk down in his seat, a sodden lump of inanimate human flesh. And Nikky, whose business, in a way, was killing, was horrified.

The chauffeur awakened, ten minutes later, to find himself securely tied with his own towing rope, and lying extremely close to the edge of death. Beside him on the ground sat a steady-eyed young man with a cut lip. The young man had lighted a cigarette, and was placing it carefully in the uninjured side of his mouth.

"Just as soon as you are up to it," said Nikky, "we shall have a little talk."

The chauffeur muttered something in the pungent patois of Karula.

"Come, come!" Nikky observed. "Speak up. No hiding behind strange tongues. But first, I have the letter. That saves your worrying about it. You can clear your mind for action." Suddenly Nikky dropped his mocking tone. He was in earnest, grim and deadly earnest.

"I have a fancy, my friend," he said, "to take that letter of yours on to its destination. But what that destination is, you are to tell me."

The man on the ground grinned sardonically. "You know better than to ask that," he said. "I will never tell you."

Nikky had thought things out fairly well, for him, in that ten minutes. In a businesslike fashion he turned the prostrate prisoner on his side, so that he faced toward the chasm. A late moon showed its depth, and the valley in which the air flowed swiftly. And having thus faced him toward the next world, Nikky, throwing away his cigarette because it hurt his lip, put a stone or two from the roadway behind his prisoner, and anchored him there.

Then he sat down and waited.

"Any news?" he asked, at the end of ten minutes' unbroken silence.

His prisoner said nothing. He was thinking, doubtless. Weighing things, too—perhaps life against betrayal, a family against separation.

Nikky examined the letter again. It was addressed to a border town in Livonia. But the town lay far behind them. The address, then, was a false one. He whistled softly.

Half an hour.

"Come, come," said Nikky fiercely. "We are losing time." He looked fierce, too. His swollen lip did that. And he was nervous. It occurred to him that his prisoner, in desperation, might roll over the edge himself, which would be most uncomfortable.

But the preceptor, and Nikky's fierce lip, and other things, had got in their work. The man on the ground stopped muttering in his patois, and turned on Nikky eyes full of hate.

"I will tell you," he said. "And you will free me. And after that—"

"Certainly," Nikky replied equably. "You will follow me to the ends of the earth—although that will not be necessary, because I don't intend to go there—and finish me off." Then, sternly: "Now, where does the letter go? I have a fancy for delivering it myself."

"If I tell you, what then?"

"This: If you tell me properly, and all goes well, I will return and release you. If I do not return, naturally you will not be released. And, for fear you meditate a treachery, I shall gang you and leave you, not here, but back a short distance. In the wood we just passed. And, because you are a brave man, and this thing may be less serious than I think it is, I give you my word of honor that if you advise me correctly, I shall return and liberate you."

"I have only your word."

"And I yours," said Nikky.

The chauffeur took a final glance around, as far as he could see, and a final shuddering look at the valley of the Ar, far below. "I will tell you," he said sullenly.
